GOI IN KNESSET—

Government will freeze prices of 'popular commodities'

By Post Knesset Reporter
The government intends to freeze prices of "popular commodities" from essential commodities already price-fixed, goods, which will not be included in the Knesset, yes, "popular commodities" represent 10 per cent of all goods.

Mr. Yosef Almog's statement that the government had decided on a price freeze was also mentioned by director-general Avraham Yitzhak yesterday (see p. 1) in opposition to a by-acting Cabinet Secretary Mr. Yosef Almog who told newsmen on Sunday, that the government had not decided on a price freeze.

The debate on the Government's price freeze, which had down two motions of no confidence in the Government, is current were of strikes threats and the increasing inflation. The government drew 55 votes in the Knesset.

Mr. Yosef Almog (who followed Mr. Yosef Almog) said that the government had decided on a price freeze.

BUT TREASURY INSISTS REPORT PREMATURE

POST Economic Correspondent

Reports that the Cabinet decided on a six-month wage freeze on Sunday, reinforced by Mr. Yosef Almog's statement to the Knesset (see adjacent column) were denied by an official Treasury spokesman yesterday. What the Ministers did was appoint a committee to examine how such a freeze could be applied, he explained.

The committee is meeting almost continuously this week, and is expected to report to the Government next Sunday, he told the Jerusalem Post. What the Cabinet will do then depends in part on what happens in the present wage struggle.

One factor is the extra cost-of-living allowance, which all parties have now agreed shall be paid next month. It is now a question of how much. Although negotiations have already started between the Manufacturers Association and the Histadrut, Government circles do not hide their view that it would be reasonable to pay 6 or 7 per cent — not the whole 11 or 12 per cent of the price rise that will have taken place in the first six months of 1975.

Democracies such as Britain and the U.S. also shied away from arbitration.

He ridiculed those who wanted the economy to regulate wages according to the laws of supply and demand. Nobody functions that way any more, he said.

The Government did not seek to eliminate the strike as a legitimate expression of the workers' will, he said. But it favoured the activation of Labour Tribunals against strikers who called a stoppage during the period of their labour contract — in cases such as the Hebrew University teachers' stoppage.

STRIKERS NOT ENEMIES

On the other hand, nor did the Government go so far as to strip strikers workers "enemies of the State," he stressed. Legitimately or otherwise, these workers conceived the strike as a means of bettering their living conditions, he said.

Mr. Almog said that the Government would be seeking to seek agreed solutions to their differences with the employers. Gahal's Elimelech Rissak said the public must be asking itself, in the current wave of strikes and strike threats, whether Israel had a Government at all. Why was the Government so demonstratively inept, he wanted to know?

The Government's duty was to persuade or compel the parties to the labour disputes to go to voluntary arbitration, he said. If it could not or would not do so, it ought to resign.

The Government concentrated too much power in its own hands that it could not avoid bearing responsibility for the present labour situation, he said. The Government had lost its authority as well as its credibility.

Doctors deny talks have made progress

By ERNIE MEYER

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Conflicting reports — optimistic and pessimistic — regarding the outcome of a five-hour meeting between the striking doctors and the employers were issued by the two sides yesterday.

The Health Ministry put out a bulletin reporting "tentative agreement on some major points," and even gave details. The doctors' spokesman denied that any progress had been made. "There is no reason for optimism," he said.

The Ministry bulletin said that a salary scale with basic starting pay of IL1,000 (instead of IL475) and going up to a top salary of IL1,900 had been provisionally agreed on. The new scale was to remain within the maximum 45.6 per cent increase limit set by the Government.

According to the Ministry, certain rapprochement was also reported in the tenuous field of job definitions and remuneration for various overtime and extra duties.

When the doctors raised the question of strike pay, the employers said that they would follow Government guidelines, e.g. allow no strike pay, the bulletin said. On the problem of pay increases retroactive to January and April 1972, respectively, the employers were to follow the example of agreements reached with other professional organizations, the said.

The doctors say that no progress was made at the meeting and they scheduled the next meeting not for the following day (today) but for tomorrow, to give the Government time to reconsider its position.

Out of concern for the public welfare the doctors decided to continue operating medical clinics during the strike. On the other hand, they have cancelled the strike exemption governing work in villages, moshavim and kibbutzim. In line with city doctors, these physicians will now only receive patients at their homes and charge a IL30 fee.

Patients arriving at hospital emergency rooms without being referred through a medical clearing centre will have to pay IL60 now. Those referred by a centre will pay only IL30. (Regular charges are IL5-7). With these high fees the doctors hope to discourage "Kupat" patients, which tend to reimburse patients.

While doctors in the Government service will stop issuing medical certificates they rejected a proposal they also stop issuing death certificates — with the resulting delay in burials. According to halacha a body has to be buried as soon as possible. (One strike said that in a recent doctors' strike in Austria, the Government gave in two days after the doctors stopped issuing death certificates).

The negotiations were conducted between Health Minister Victor Shalom, Deputy Minister Chaim Herzog, Minister Pinhas Sapir on the effect of Chancellor Brandt's recent visit on German reparations payments.

Dr. Goldmann denied he is connected in any way to the efforts to arrange a meeting between Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba and Israeli leaders. He said he did not think such a meeting would be of decisive importance in any event, since Bourguiba's influence in the Arab world is limited.

'Allon plan' is no solution Jordan Premier warns Sadat must make war

By BRIAN ARTHUR

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

BORNI. — Egypt's President Sadat wants war with Israel this summer, because he has "no other way out," according to West Germany's "Quick" magazine.

"Quick" says it learned this in a recent interview with Jordan Premier Zaid al-Rifai who told the magazine about a secret meeting between him and Sadat.

In the interview, "Quick" does not quote Rifai directly on Sadat's alleged plans, but sums them up in three points.

Egypt will attack Israel along the Suez Canal "soon," says "Quick" because:

- Sadat must live up to his repeated threats of war.
- Keeping Egyptian troops on the Suez Canal is costing Egypt a "fortune."
- Israel's "unwillingness" to back off even 40 kilometres from the Canal makes direct Israel-Arab negotiations impossible at present.

Instead Sadat will strike militarily. "Quick" said Rifai was worried about Egypt's intentions. "Jordan can't afford a war. We know that we would lose it with our 60,000 men army because Israel is stronger," he said.

The Jordanian Premier hopes hostilities would be limited between Egypt and Israel in the Sinai. "But if we are attacked, we must defend ourselves, and this unwanted war can do immense harm to our people," he said.

Rifai said he did not matter in which order the Israel withdrawal took place, and that it did not have to come overnight. "We can talk about this, and other things too. For instance about a Demilitarized Zone on the West Bank of the Jordan, when Israel gives this area back to us. We can realistically, more so than other, after all we lost the war and must pay the price, but when peace is at stake, the Israelis should pay their price too, in this case withdrawal from the occupied areas," Rifai said.

Rifai said Jordan would discuss certain border corrections after withdrawal, but that it continues to support in principle King Hussein's plan.

Mr. Nixon and the Soviet leader drove to the State Department to witness the signing ceremony, held a few hours before the start of the second session of their talks, which will deal with trade and economic relations, expected to be among the key topics of the week-long summit.

A majority in Congress still firmly opposes legislation granting tariff concessions and large-scale credits to develop the Soviet economy until Moscow ends its restrictions on emigration of Russian Jews to Israel.

President Nixon assured Mr. Brezhnev he remained committed to a trade and economic agreement signed last October calling for expanded trade and most-favoured-nation tariff treatment and large-scale credits for the Soviet Union.

These benefits would enable the Soviet Union to go ahead with plans for massive American investments to exploit natural gas and other resources and provide the money with which to buy American technology it needs to develop its economy.

On Mr. Brezhnev's schedule yesterday, following the State Department ceremony, was a luncheon with main's federation plan for the West Bank.

Rifai added: "We reject a three-part federation between Jordan, Palestine and Israel, because the new Palestinian state would become an Israel satellite."

On Jerusalem, he said the city must become either an "open city," or it must be administered jointly by both sides. He said, too, the key to peace is Israel's willingness to show its willingness to cooperate.

"Quick" said Rifai spoke moderately of the Israelis and did not "revile" them. He conceded that for 25 years many Arab states had pursued a policy dictated by emotions.

Mr. Brezhnev urged the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at a luncheon yesterday to drop its opposition to the Soviet Union. He declared that more than 95 per cent of the Jews who wish to leave the Soviet Union have been given permission to go.

Senator Hubert Humphrey, reading from his notes on the speech and the question that followed, said the Soviet leader, who spoke for two hours, told them that of 61,000 Jews who last year applied to leave the Soviet Union, 60,200 applications were granted. Of 11,400 applications for Jewish emigration received in the first five months of this year, 10,100 had been granted.

Asked if he detected any willingness by Brezhnev to compromise on the Jewish emigration issue, Humphrey said, "Yes, I do."

He reported that Brezhnev also said the exit fee had been dropped except for youths who benefited from a government scholarship and have never held a job. (UPI)

He further stated his belief that the Soviet Union would have to modify its present position on conditions of Jewish life in the Soviet Union and emigration if it seriously wants détente with the U.S.

Mr. Stein, who is current Chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations in the U.S., said he spoke at some length with Mr. Gromyko and Mr. Dobrynin during President Nixon's dinner for Communist party secretary Leonid Brezhnev at the White House.

Mr. Stein told The Post: "During the course of the evening, in addition to the opportunity to introduce myself and what my interests were to Mr. Brezhnev, I spoke a longer time with Ambassador Dobrynin and Mr. Gromyko as a result of which conversation, I think, an important new channel of communication to the Presidents' Conference has been opened, dealing with matters of the problem of Soviet emigration."

"My discussions were in terms of general concerns of human rights and human freedom," he said. "It was not a forum for specifics."

Mr. Stein said that he hoped that the Brezhnev visit itself "would bring forward some action in terms of concrete acts or series of acts by the Soviet Union" with regard to emigration.

Asked if he thought the Soviet Union would go so far as to comply with the spirit, if not the letter, of the Jackson amendment, Mr. Stein replied: "If the Soviet Union seriously wants détente with the U.S. and all the benefits that flow from that, I think that with the strength of the feelings of the American Jewish community they are going to have to move away from the positions they at present hold regarding conditions of emigration and life for Soviet Jews."

INA adds: — However, earlier in the day, Alexander Yefremyev, the Soviet embassy press counsellor, vehemently denounced Soviet Jewish efforts to emigrate. "We regard those who want to leave our country as traitors," he said. He called Prof. Benjamin Levich, a Soviet scientist who has applied for permission to emigrate, a "house" for "spreading lies about us."

At the State Department about 800 dancers and musicians representing 16 international unions picketed to protest a proposed U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange agreement which they say would cost them at least one-third of their U.S. performing dates.

Two youths in striped prison garb were among the dozen protesters who marched outside the mission on Monday. They said they were trying to dramatize the plight of Soviet Jews in prison camps.

About 25 members of the Jewish Defence League were arrested in Washington, on Monday in three separate demonstrations near the Soviet embassy, according to the JDL's office.

The Rev. Paul Lindeboom, executive director of the Christian Defence League, and an associate, were also arrested after they attempted to hold up a sign reading "Dictator Brezhnev free Soviet Christians."

No talks while areas are occupied: Zayyat

COPENHAGEN (Reuters). — The Egyptian Foreign Minister, Mohamed Zayyat, said here yesterday that no talks with Israel or the opening of the Suez Canal could start as long as Arab territories were occupied. "If I sign on the dotted line under this duress, the signature will not be valid," Zayyat said in a television interview.

Asked if he detected any willingness by Brezhnev to compromise on the Jewish emigration issue, Humphrey said, "Yes, I do."

Direct mayors vote: second try at getting bill through

By ASHER WALLFISH, Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

The Knesset yesterday voted to committee, on the preliminary reading, a private members' bill for the direct election of mayors — identical to the bill voted down on the third reading before the Passover recess.

The bill got 44 supporting votes from Labour, the Independent Liberals, the State List, the Free Centre, Ha'olam Hazeh and Meir Avizohar (Ind.). The 32 votes against it came from Mapam, Gahal, the NRP, Aguda, the Communists, the New Communists and Shalom Cohen (Ind.).

The bill was sponsored by five Alignment M.K.s — Mordechai Ben-Porat, Moshe Baram, Yonatan Yitzhak, Mordechai Surkis and Haim Zadok — the L.P.'s Gideon Hauser, the Free Centre's Shmuel Tamir, and Meir Avizohar.

The Labour Alignment, which is committed to support legislation for direct election of mayors, turned out in force. Several Alignment ministers were in the chamber to back the bill, including Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, a colleague of the bill's chief sponsor, Mordechai Ben-Porat. Mr. Dayan remained for the vote as a personal gesture to him. The bill has to be prepared in committee, then returned to the plenum for a formal first reading. It must then be returned to committee to be prepared for the second and third readings. Hence, the prospects of the measure becoming law before the Seventh Knesset completes its final session, in mid-July, are very slim. The bill's opponents will do all they can to delay the committee process, by a filibuster-type counter-attack.

The father of the bill, Mr. Ben-Porat, who spoke on behalf of the co-sponsors, said an estimated 78 per cent of Israel's population wanted direct election of mayors.

Mr. Ben-Porat said the measure would promote a healthier and more dynamic system of local government, save money, increase efficiency, promote stability and — above all — attract capable men and women to play a role in local government.

Efforts had been made to sabotage the measure earlier this year, he said, but the sponsoring parties had agreed to make the effort to get the measure through a second time. (Labour itself killed the first bill because of last-minute amendments specifying an absolute majority of the popular vote. This bill calls for a 40 per cent plurality.)

The voting public would have, at election time, who they were backing for mayor, and that the mayor could not be ousted later by coalition machinations or floor-crossing. The measure would also reduce the number of deputy mayors, he said. Mr. Ben-Porat said he had telephoned Law Committee chairman Yosef Goldschmidt abroad, but had not got a promise that the Committee's agenda would give priority to the mayors bill. Accordingly, Mr. Ben-Porat said, he would propose that the Interior Committee instead prepare the bill for its formal first reading.

The Aguda's Menachem Porush, who represented the opposition to the bill, said it was ludicrous to expect a bill to become law in four weeks, after it had been stalled for seven years. He accused Mr. Ben-Porat and his co-sponsors of harassing the Knesset with a tiresome proposal which could never be prepared in committee and passed in the plenum in time.

SOVIET JEWS

started speaking out and stirring the conscience of world Jewry. The Committee spokesman said that according to reports now arriving from the U.S.S.R. the situation of the Jews there did not improve following the visit of President Nixon to Moscow, but had in many cases even deteriorated.

The Action Committee has several hundred names of Jews in distress in the U.S.S.R., and would like Israel to establish contact with them. The list of names may be obtained by writing to the Action Committee of Newcomers from the Soviet Union, P.O.B. 248 Givatayim. The chairman of the Council for Soviet Jewry, S.Z. Abramov, M.K., told The Jerusalem Post he would like to see exactly what Mr. Stein said before the Council commented. On the face of it, he said, it sounds "too good to be true."

While the fate of Soviet Jews appeared to be dependent on what takes place at the Nixon-Brezhnev Summit, Dr. Edward Trepper, son of Leib Trepper of Poland, was in the third day of his hunger strike at the Western Wall in Jerusalem yesterday. He declared he would continue this — his fourth and probably final — hunger strike until the Soviet leader ends his U.S. visit.

Trepper is protesting the Polish Government's refusal to permit his father, who is sick, to leave Poland — a refusal said to be prompted by an order from the Kremlin. Leib Trepper was head of the anti-Nazi "Red Orchestra" spy ring during World War II and was subsequently interned in Russian labour camps for 10 years, during the Stalin regime.

Another hunger striker — Prof. Alexander Lunce, in the second week of a hunger strike in Moscow along with six other Jewish scientists — yesterday communicated by phone with staff members of the Technion, who held a one-day solidarity hunger strike in Haifa. He reported that one of the strikers, mathematician Anatoli Leibguber, has received an exit permit. Prof. Lunce stressed that the seven scientists were acting not only on their own behalf, but for every Jew who wants to emigrate. Prof. Lunce said the Moscow strikers were in good spirits, and were grateful for the support they have received.

Meanwhile, the wife of a Jew interned in the Potma Labour camp has received permission to leave for Israel with her daughter. Hava Botman, wife of engineer Eliezer Botman who was sentenced in the Leningrad trials to 10 years as a labour camp for his cabaret Khlebnitskiy, which adopted the family, that she has obtained the coveted exit permit and will be arriving in Israel shortly.

Another Russian Jewish family, from Novosibirsk, yesterday cabled the Interior Minister, Dr. Yosef Burg, to thank him for granting them Israeli citizenship. The Interior Ministry spokesman, Yitzhak Agassi, told The Jerusalem Post that the family's name had to be withheld, for fear the Russian authorities would persecute them. He said "several hundred families" in Russia to date have received Israeli citizenship, which is granted only upon the recipient's request.

KNESSET ON PRICES

teachers in the past had proved that the firmest of Government negatives was not always to be taken literally. Dr. Rimit said that one could not take literally the Government's statements about Cost-of-Living increments and price rises. The Treasury had predicted that this year prices would rise by just a fraction less than last year's 13 per cent. Yet prices had already risen by 13 per cent in the first six months of 1973 alone.

Waterless moshav keeps children home

LAOCHSE — The 70 families living in Moshav Nahshala, near Kiryat Gat, have kept their more than 200 children home from school for the past two days as a protest move against the Mekorot water company. Mekorot cut off the water to Nahshala 10 days ago because the moshav was regularly exceeding its water quota.

The moshav secretary, Yitzhak Ben-Moshe, admitted that the village uses much more water than it is allocated, but said there were mitigating circumstances. According to him, each family has a quota of 12,000 cum. a year, and in a normal year, will consume only twice that. In a bad year, they use more.

He explained that unlike other moshavim, Nahshala grows only vegetables, which require large amounts of water. Moreover, the village's fields are on slopes, which means that they need more water to irrigate than level fields, he said. If the school strike doesn't help, he said, the villagers, children included, will all go to Tel Aviv to demonstrate outside the offices of the Moshav Movement.

Cameramen outnumber guests at Dahlia's 'hupa'

By YAAQOV FRIEDLER, Jerusalem Post Reporter

SHAVEH-ZION — Actress-singer Dahlia Lavi was married to Peter Rittmaster, a Florida yacht builder, on the lawn of the community centre here, yesterday evening. It was the third marriage for the bride and the first for the groom. The rabbi of Nahariya, Dr. Aharon Keller, who had officiated at her first wedding here, presided. Only members of the families, including her five-year-old son, Reuven, neighbours and an army of photographers who outnumbered the invited guests attended.

Tall, slim and sustained the bride wore a turquoise dress with a long skirt and an embroidered, sequined bolero, made in London. She wore a headpiece of daisies from her mother's garden, made up by her new sister-in-law, Toni Rittmaster-Madden. The couple are to fly to Miami on Friday, where they will make their home, though she will also keep a house in London and considers the two-storey villa she has built here for her mother (her father died 20 years ago) her "real home."

IL4m. to be paid in drought compensation

Some 14m. in drought compensation will be paid to farmers this year by the Treasury. This decision was made by the Drought Committee headed by Yisrael Arkin, Finance Ministry Assistant Controller. About 80,000 dunams of land were affected in the Negev, 60,000 dunams in Eastern Galilee, and 60,000 dunams in the Golan Heights and Jordan Valley.

The Free Centre's Shmuel Tamir said that all along the line of price rises, the Government itself had given the first signal and sent prices soaring. The public had no choice but to follow the spiral.

Mr. Tamir said that probably the greatest share of blame was rooted in the Government's housing policy. In the rest of the free world, 70 per cent of the population was quite satisfied with rental housing — but in Israel this was impossible. Bank of Israel statistics showed that it took 1,270 work-days to buy the average home in 1961; but in 1971 it took 1,500 work-days — a rise of 18.5 per cent.

In other words, the average Israeli was therefore forced to work for four years of his life to buy a home which in many cases he did not even want. But he had no choice.

Another problem in this country's economy was that most Israelis were tied to one single employer — the State — who was relatively speaking the largest employer in the world. As a result, the wages in one sector were always linked to the wages in another, in a vicious circle.

No wonder all the Treasury could do was to drag its feet as a matter of policy — just to gain time, he said.

Class warfare was not behind the recurrent labour troubles in Israel, Mr. Tamir believed. The economy was bedevilled by the strike between the workers — and the workers' Government.

Bar-Ilan awards 860 degrees

RAMAT GAN. — A record number of bachelor degrees were conferred at the 14th annual graduation exercises at Bar-Ilan University yesterday. In all 860 degrees, certificates and diplomas were awarded. Of the bachelor degrees, 875 were in social sciences, 187 in Jewish studies and humanities and 140 in natural sciences.

Among the graduates was pilot Giora Rom, a former prisoner of war in Egypt. He received a B.A. in economics and political science. At the same time 147 teachers' certificates were awarded as well as 11 diplomas to graduates of Bar-Ilan's Institute of Local Government.

Last family forced out of Nordiya Circle

TEL AVIV. — Police yesterday had to use force to evacuate the last shack left in the Nordiya Circle, the site now being renovated as Dizengoff Centre.

The owner of the shack, Shalom Medina, and his family had resisted eviction through court action which dragged on for two years. The final eviction order was issued several weeks ago and served yesterday. Execution officers met sharp resistance from Mrs. Medina and her daughter. One policewoman, Inspector Tamir Alhadid, was hurt and had to be treated for injuries to her arm. The two women were arrested, and the eviction then proceeded smoothly.

Before the city began the Dizengoff Centre project, several hundred families lived in an assortment of shacks in the Nordiya vicinity. All but the Medinas accepted the compensation offered and moved elsewhere. (Itm)

Two held on hashish charge

Police in Jerusalem picked up two East Jerusalem residents Monday night on suspicion of being in possession of nearly two kilograms of hashish.

The arrest of the two was the latest in a series of detentions in the past two weeks of suspected hashish and opium merchants in Jerusalem.

In Haifa, three men were sentenced yesterday by the District Court for possessing 37 piqqs of hashish. The police found the merchandise hidden in an Acre warehouse in April.

Muhsen Ben Mohammed Bayumi, 25, owner of the warehouse, was sentenced to three years. Eliahu Kleinhandler, a disabled veteran from Acre, and Fuad Ben George Hava, 35, of Haifa, got six months each for transporting and helping to hide the hashish. (Itm)

Paper mill is struck; stoppage at customs; professors still out; State Attorneys threaten

Jerusalem Post Staff

The board of directors of the American-Israel Paper Mills yesterday backed the threat of the management of its Hadara plant to shut down the firm unless the striking workers return to their jobs.

The board approved the refusal of general manager Issachar Haimovich to negotiate with the 800 workers on the company's daily payroll, who walked off their jobs on Sunday afternoon without having declared a labour dispute. The strike is backed by the Hadara Labour Council. The plant employs some 800 daily workers and another 500 on the monthly payroll.

The board authorised Mr. Haimovich to take legal action against those workers who left high pressure boilers and other machines in operation which, they said, endangered life and property.

The workers walked out when the management refused to accede to their demand to turn a IL850 loan for each worker into a grant.

COURT APPEARANCES

In another labour dispute, the State Attorneys announced they would stop making court appearances as of July 8, if their demands for more money are not met by then.

The attorneys are demanding extra pay for court appearances, and want their salary scale to be linked to that of the judges. They had declared their intention to strike as of last Sunday, but postponed the deadline pending a meeting with the Justice Minister, the Civil Service Commissioner and representatives of the Histadrut.

At the meeting, which was held Sunday, the Justice Minister and the Civil Service Commissioner rejected the demand for extra pay for court appearances, and declined to give a reply on the salary issue. They also rejected a proposal by the Histadrut to put the extra pay issue to arbitration.

Prof. Rabin said that if it continues until next Sunday, end of the academic year, final exams are held, then will have wasted part of the year. If the exams are rescheduled for later in the summer, it upsets the plans of many to get summer jobs. Assistant lecturers, who were on strike, returned to work Sunday, do not set final terms.

In the absence of President Rabin, Haiman, who is at university business, Prof. E. conducted negotiations with striking professors. The 2,000 of the strikers, Prof. Gideki, has called a press conference this morning.

London personnel reports baseless' sign Ministry jobs source

Post Diplomatic Correspondent
Foreign Ministry is investigating a source of recent stories that London personnel changes at Israel's Embassy in London, Ministry spokesman Avner said the Ministry would take suitable action if it was necessary against the source of baseless items of ted in Monday's Post, the "Daily Mirror," citing the Israeli Embassy, wrote a scale exodus of Israeli from London and ascribed the exodus to work under Rafael, who is expected to be the next ambassador. The embassy — and in — have also been telling that the present ambassador, Michael Comay, hoped not to be re-elected when he reached the end of his term of five years.

Official statement yesterday, by Minister Abba Eban, confirmed that Mr. Comay would be ending his tour of duty when he turned 65, the regular practice in the Foreign Office. (All overseas appointments automatically terminate at age 65, though some officials may be re-elected for a second term.)

Mr. Comay, 65, has been in London since 1968. He is a Treasury man in London as an Economic Adviser, and his tour of duty will end in July. He is expected to be replaced by Mr. Eban's son, Shimon Eban, who is currently in the Ministry of Defense.

Minister at the London Embassy, Mr. Eban, said that the reports of a "scale exodus" were "baseless" and that the Ministry would take "suitable action" if necessary against the source of such reports.

Agmon's new appointment criticized

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
Gahal's Gideon Patti has criticized the decision to appoint Finance Minister Director-General Avraham Agmon head of the new Israel Development Corporation — a major investment project of German-Jewish entrepreneurs. Mr. Patti charged that Agmon, in his present post, was in a position to grant his future employers far-reaching advantages. He noted that Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir's former chief aides had frequently gravitated to the directorships of major corporations like Israel Development.

Romania pays crash compensation

HAIFA. — A Rumanian state insurance company will pay $8,000 in compensation to an elderly Haifa couple whose only son was killed in a Rumanian airliner crash three years ago. Yitzhak and Clara Cohen, 65 and 68, sued three months ago in the Haifa District Court against the national Rumanian airline, Tarom. They said their son, Yacov, 45, was a Rumanian citizen who had contributed to their support. The company initially rejected the claim, arguing that under the Geneva Convention the Cohens were not entitled to compensation because they were not Rumanian residents. But, last week, two representatives of the company came to Israel and settled with the plaintiffs out of court.

Haifa Arabs Masked men want own Labour M.K. rob Nof Yam post office

By YACOV FRIEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. — A public committee here has begun collecting signatures on a petition calling on the Labour Party to give Haifa's Arab community a "safe place" on the party's Knesset slate. A spokesman for the all-Arab committee said their candidate was Elias Matar, 43, a Greek Catholic, who is adviser on Arab affairs to Kupat Holim. They already have "several thousand" signatures, he said. The committee says a seat in the Knesset is only the first step due to Haifa's Arab population, which now numbers 25,000. Some 12,000 of them are eligible voters — and 70 per cent of them have always voted for Labour. Only a Knesset representative can help solve the urgent problems of the Arab population — including overcrowding in housing and schools — the committee feels. The committee warned that it would have to "draw conclusions" if its man did not get a safe place on the list. "Many of us will be unable to vote for candidates imposed on us by party functionaries dealing with Arab affairs, as has been the practice until now," they said. The committee says it has already been promised a safe place on the Alignment list for Haifa. City Council, for Salim Jubran, a Labour Council official.

TEL AVIV. — A suspected burglar who escaped from detention two weeks ago was caught hiding in a wardrobe in his Bat Yam home on Monday. He was remanded by Magistrates' Court here yesterday for 15 days. The suspect, Mordechai Lanziano, 23, had been arrested in connection with ten burglaries in Holon and Bat Yam. Field in the Holon lock-up, he was asked to sweep out the guard room, and escaped when the duty officer was called to the phone. Lanziano was declared a wanted criminal, and was sought in vain until Monday, when police were tipped off that he was hiding at home. They now believe he committed additional burglaries while on the run. (Tm)

WOMEN'S MOVEMENT LEADER BETTY FRIEDMAN

Israel still trapped in 'feminine mystique'

By JUDY PERES
Jerusalem Post Reporter
Israel is now in the "feminine mystique" stage from which the U.S. began emerging ten years ago, according to Betty Friedman, whose book "The Feminine Mystique" helped launch the woman's movement in the U.S. a decade ago. "Israeli women claim not to want equality with men," Mrs. Friedman declared yesterday. She was addressing a session of the World Association of Women Journalists and Writers at the Shalom Hotel. "They would rather be 'feminine,'" she said. But Mrs. Friedman predicted this stage would pass — possibly with a change in Israel's security situation, which is currently forcing men to act "masculine" and women, consequently, to play "feminine" roles. The "masculine" revolution of women, which is going on in most of the world, will eventually affect Israel, too, she declared, "not because I or anyone else put ideas in women's heads, but as an outgrowth of historical forces." A conscious movement of women demanding equal rights is only one of two necessary stages in a process that will eventually revolutionize all existing social institutions, Mrs. Friedman said. The second involves both women and men — who need to be released from their limiting (and divorce-producing) sex type roles. She predicted that after women were liberated from their sex type role (that of dependent, helpless, mindless creatures), men could be from theirs (as strong, self-confident, unemotional, insensitive beings). These polarized sex types will have to give way, she said, because they are tearing marriages asunder at present. The workshop at which Mrs. Friedman spoke was preceded by lunch with Labour Minister Yosef Almogi. He told the 250 foreign delegates to the convention that Israel was the first country in the world where divorced women did not have to pursue reluctant husbands for maintenance payments — the courts will do that for them, and the Government will pay their maintenance until the husband can be found and compelled to pay. Mr. Almogi said Israel was interested in bringing more women into the labour force. There were now 340,000 working women (comprising 34 per cent of the labour force), of which 80,000 have small children. His office has been "successfully" working on establishing a programme of vocational training for women and day creches for young children of working mothers. But efforts to obtain reductions for home expenses incurred by working women were still unsuccessful. Earlier, the convention delegates called at the Knesset and met with Deputy Speaker Tova Sanhedral and Zena Harman, Matilda Ghez, Shoshana Arbel-Almoshino and Ada Sereni-Feinberg, M.K.s. In the evening Mayor Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem held a reception at the Israel Museum for the convention delegates.

Move not to embarrass Nixon during summit

WATERGATE HEARINGS POSTPONED

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — The Senate public hearings into the Watergate scandal have been put off till next Monday to avoid embarrassing President Nixon during his summit here with Soviet Leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Mr. John Dean, who was sacked as White House Counselor and has charged that the President was aware of attempts to cover up the Watergate scandal, had been due to appear yesterday at a televised hearing of the Senate committee.

But now, when he does appear, Mr. Brezhnev will be on his way home.

The decision to postpone the hearings and Mr. Dean's appearance so that the President would not be embarrassed during the summit was taken on Monday night by the committee and was announced as special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox said he was studying the legal aspects of issuing a subpoena to the President to testify on the scandal, if needed.

Mr. Cox, who has sweeping powers to probe every angle of the bug-ging of Democratic Party headquarters and the attempt to cover it up, emphasized at a press conference that he had no reason to believe his investigation would require the President's testimony.

The delay in the Watergate hearings was a victory for the Nixon forces in the Senate, who had feared news coverage of the hearings would overshadow the President's meetings with Mr. Brezhnev.

Democrats in the Senate acknowledged that one reason for delaying the hearings was so that they could not be blamed if anything went wrong with the Nixon-Brezhnev summit.

The Senate investigating committee acted after receiving a joint request from Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott and Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield urging that the hearings be postponed to avoid jeopardizing the summit.

Committee Chairman Sam Ervin (Democrat, North Carolina) said: "I can see how the President's attention might be distracted by a Watergate investigation while he is trying to negotiate an arms limitation agreement."

In a related development, anti-Nixon Congressman Paul McCloskey, a liberal Republican from California, cancelled plans on Monday night to hold a discussion in the House of Representatives on whether President Nixon should be removed from office by Congress.

Mr. McCloskey, who opposed Mr. Nixon in the Republican presidential primaries last year, said he decided it would be appropriate to wait until the summit was over before holding the discussion on possible impeachment.

The fact that Mr. Cox even mentioned the possibility of issuing a subpoena to Mr. Nixon surprised political observers, who pointed out that any evidence implicating the President so far has been hearsay or second-hand.

"It is a possible avenue of legal inquiry and therefore one that I have to be informed upon," Mr. Cox told reporters.

Mr. Nixon acknowledged on May 22 that there apparently had been a high-level cover up of the scandal. But he has declined to take any questions from reporters since the Watergate affair burst wide open, and the White House has said he would refuse to appear before the Senate investigating committee.

Connally, Ziegler rift denied

LOS ANGELES (UPI). — John B. Connally plans to leave the White House advisory position he took up five weeks ago because of President Nixon's refusal to follow his advice about firing Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler, the "Los Angeles Times" said yesterday.

Connally advised Mr. Nixon to dismiss Ziegler because his usefulness as press secretary was limited by "Ziegler's role as a spokesman during the Watergate cover-up and his fear that Ziegler might ultimately be tainted personally by the Watergate affair," the "Times" quoted an associate of Connally's as saying.

In Washington, a White House spokesman said Ziegler and Connally are "on the best of terms."

The spokesman said both men consider the "Times" story inaccurate. "Governor Connally and Ron Ziegler have talked at great length and will do so in the future," the spokesman said. "The tone and content of the 'Los Angeles Times' story does not characterize those discussions. Implications of the story are without foundation. The relationship between Mr. Ziegler and Governor Connally is on the best of terms."

The "Times" said Connally, a former governor of Texas and secretary of the navy, confronted Ziegler and told him he should resign.

Instead of firing the press secretary, Mr. Nixon promoted Ziegler to special assistant and expanded his authority.

"The Times" said Connally believed Ziegler planted stories that he (Connally) did not have access to the President and was upset that he had not been offered the post of Secretary of State.

Connally is "more over this matter and Mr. Nixon's rejection of some of his advice on economic matters," the "Times" said. Connally plans to take a 60-day trip and will leave the White House staff when he returns, it added.

JOHN DEAN

Cox gets court ruling in bid to charge Dean

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox won a major court test yesterday in his efforts to bring fired White House lawyer John Dean to trial.

A judge granted his request to put a court seal and date on documentary evidence collected so far against Mr. Dean, who is said to be ready to "blow the lid off" about alleged top-level White House knowledge of the Watergate affair.

The court decision will enable Mr. Cox to show that the government's case against Mr. Dean has been built up independently of the televised Senate hearings into the Watergate break-in.

Mr. Dean, dismissed by President Nixon in April, has been granted immunity from evidence he will give before the Senate investigating committee next week.

Mr. Cox and other Federal prosecutors had opposed granting immunity on grounds that it would be hard to produce further evidence that could result in Mr. Dean facing criminal charges for his role in the affair.

Dean was the centre of charges on Monday by syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, who alleged that the former Presidential Counsel had used borrowed Nixon re-election campaign funds last year to finance his honeymoon.

Anderson, who did not specify the source of his report in a commentary broadcast on television here, said Dean had admitted to Senate investigators that he borrowed $4,000 from cash campaign funds in his possession and left an I.O.U.

Anderson said investigators were told the money was used to finance the honeymoon of Dean and his second wife.

It was not immediately clear whether the money was ever repaid.

In a similar report, the "New York Times" said investigators were told the money had been repaid.

ANKARA (Reuter). — One of Turkey's best-known left-wing intellectuals, Ugur Alasokaptan, was sentenced to six years, four months imprisonment by a military court in here yesterday for supporting student riots which swept Turkish campuses between 1969 and 1971.

He is also permanently banned from holding public office — a ruling which means he can never again teach in a Turkish institution.

Nuclear test protests won't sway France

PARIS (AP). — France will not be influenced by campaigns against forthcoming nuclear tests in South Pacific, Foreign Minister Michel Jobert said yesterday.

He hinted at American anti-viet influence behind the campaign led by Australia and New Zealand against the atmospheric tests at Mururoa Atoll, expected to start within the next two weeks.

Jobert denounced "the temerity of the Super-powers to settle their dialogue the division of responsibilities."

That and the still fragile state of the nine European Common market nations was full justification for France's continued effort to its defence, to avoid placing the destiny of the nation in the hands of outside referees.

'Chrysler UJ hired thugs'

Their protest came after from the nearby Chrysler plant said "hired thugs" truck had crashed through picket lines used violence — picket Chrysler employees.

Price, Labour M.P. for Coventry, said Chrysler of using "waterfront" tactics. "The UJ is prepared to do as the kind of thuggery found New York riverside then lead to the most bitter seen in the motor industry town," he said.

FRENCH JUSTIFY WIRE-TAPPING

PARIS (AP). — A high government official told the French Senate yesterday that wire-tapping by the Government would continue.

Chirac Stin, who is State Secretary in the Cabinet, told the Senate that the French Premier, Defence Minister and Interior Minister would continue to order phones tapped as necessary. He rejected a proposal that a Senate committee supervise the wire-tappers.

The French public has long accepted wire-tapping as a necessary evil of the political system. Politicians have protested from time to time, usually when in opposition, without effect.

Recently, however, newspapers have claimed that government wire-tapping has spread from legitimate security areas into political espionage and other unjustified cases. Some newspapers have portrayed the authorities concerned as almost paranoid in their quest for secret information.

Jacques Duclos, a Communist politician, told the Senate that wire-tapping was "a base police method inherited by the Nazi occupier in World War II."

The basic telephone tapping system is in fact that left over by the Gestapo when the Germans were thrown out of France. The wire-tappers are headed by a general and carry the vague title of "interior control groupings."

Stin said this system is continue and revealed that government was most concerned about the activities of its left and right-wing political groups, "whose aim is to destroy the Republic's institutions."

"Whether it concerns the internal or external security of the state, modern national defence, foreign relations of all kinds on our territory or agents trying to influence French policy by official or other means, the government has the right to protect such actions and can do so if it is well-informed," Stin said.

Within this context, he said wire-taps were ordered in cases of "extraordinary" labour violence, violent job actions, subversive movements of the extreme right and the recruitment agents by foreign governments.

Even persons only marginally involved in such cases were not spared, Stin said. But he assured the legislators that none of Parliament were subject to wire-tapping.

Stin did not say how people were being monitored by the government, but he claimed that 4,000 phones tapped.

ULSTER REPRISAL WAVE GROWS

BELFAST (UPI). — British forces reinforced tight security measures in Belfast yesterday against a threat to kill Protestants in reprisal for the killings of Roman Catholics.

Hundreds of soldiers manned street roadblocks and put vehicles through rigorous searches, especially in Belfast's "twilight zones" where Catholic and Protestant areas meet.

Callers who said they spoke for the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army telephoned Belfast newspapers on Monday night and said the Provisionals would kill Protestants in reprisal for the weekend killings of two Catholics.

A new Protestant terrorist organization, the Ulster Freedom Fighters (UFF), claimed responsibility for killing the Catholics.

One purported call from the UFF said the Provisionals would ensure Protestants could "no longer walk the streets safely." Another said the Provisionals would and their policy of giving bomb warnings and henceforth would bomb Protestant targets without warning.

Another call resulted in the shutdown of Belfast's largest Protestant cemetery, the Protestant Cemetery — which is in a area — would be shut. A spokesman said City Councils be closed until further notice.

Meanwhile, more than 50 Catholic terrorist suspects were moved to an isolation block in the Maze prison by a campaign of intimidation, detainees, sources disclosed.

The men claimed in a plea to the British government to be beaten and ostracized for the IRA and seeking release from the Maze.

Reliable sources said Catholic who hanged himself in prison 10 days ago had been a victim of similar intimidation.

In Reading, England, housewife said on Monday collected 35,000 signatures for the withdrawal of British troops from Northern Ireland.

Menzies and Meek, who were in the submarine's forward plastic bubble compartment, were pulled out and spent an hour and 15 minutes in a decompression chamber before being pronounced in good condition.

Stover and Link were in a rear compartment, where navy officials said the temperature had dropped to 4.4 centigrade while the submarine was on the bottom.

This, plus the carbon dioxide build-up and the fact that the pressure in the rear compartment had risen to the equivalent of that 110 metres below the ocean's surface, posed problems not encountered in opening the plastic bubble section, navy officials said.

The two men could be seen through a tiny porthole lying motionless on the deck. Commander Smith said yesterday he surmised that Dr. Youngblood had the men were dead "because of movement or anything in the water."

When the submarine surfaced on Monday, it already had passed since peered crisis point when was due to be exhausted.

BOURGUIBA'S PLAN

TUNISIA'S President Habib Bourguiba is continuing his campaign, begun three weeks ago, to seek what is erroneously called an alternative road for the Arabs in their quest for a solution to the Middle Eastern conflict. Yesterday he again outlined his views in a speech at the International Labour Organization convention in Geneva.

As he did in 1965, Bourguiba again advocates that the Arab leaders adopt what he terms more realistic attitudes towards Israel. Eight years ago, he made his startling declarations as part of a struggle for the leadership of the Arab world, when he attempted to challenge Nasser. Now, it appears that he is again trying to draw attention to a more moderate line as he seems to be challenging both Egyptian President Sadat and especially Libyan leader Gaddafi. Egypt and Libya expect to unite later this year and Tunisia will gain a powerful southern neighbour, much to her discomfort.

What is Bourguiba saying? Basically he asserts that the Arabs cannot defeat Israel in a military campaign. Were they strong enough to annihilate Israel, they would have done so long ago. Meanwhile, their extremist posture has alienated much support for the Arab cause, and this has to be corrected. Bourguiba feels that the Arab case has to be presented to the world in such a manner as to preclude the old slogans of "throwing the Jews into the sea." He wants to put Israel into a position where it will appear to be rejecting a reasonable solution, defying both the U.N. and world public opinion.

The solution he offered in 1965 and which he is now repeating is a return to the 1947 partition borders, a voice for the Palestinians in deciding their future, and a political settlement with Israel.

It is not surprising that, formally, Bourguiba has not yet replied to Mr. Meir's suggestion that they meet to discuss his proposals for peace. He realizes that such a meeting would unravel the real meaning of his plan. It would then be seen that the main difference between his ideas and those of Sadat and Gaddafi lies in their presentation. While they call openly for the elimination of Israel, Bourguiba intends the same goal but in a gradual manner, which would be well received in the world as a token of moderation and reason.

In this way Israel would be asked to withdraw first to the 1967 lines, then to the 1947 lines and finally to agree to the return of all Arab refugees. This would, of course, eventually ensure Israel's disappearance.

Bourguiba's plans are, therefore, far more dangerous for Israel because they are couched in conciliatory terms. It is more difficult to explain to others the true meaning of Bourguiba's aims, because in the present impasse, any Arab leader who does not openly call for the destruction of Israel is considered moderate and sensible. Living at the other side of the Mediterranean, the Tunisian leader can well afford to enter the arena. It does not obligate him to anything concrete.

Yet, despite the dangers involved, we must strive to make contact with Bourguiba, like any other Arab leader, if he is ready for it. For the moment talks begin, there is no telling how they could progress and what avenues could be opened.

THE CHOICE FOR JERUSALEM

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

LAST winter, after a short but spectacular career as a member of the Jerusalem Urban Planning Unit, architect Art Kitcher flew off to London to write a book on Jerusalem planning. The book, written in just six weeks and illustrated with more than 150 of his own sketches and plans, has arrived in Israel in time, as Kitcher intended, for the meeting of the Jerusalem Committee which began this week.

Entitled "The New Jerusalem," the book is a blistering indictment of the Government and Municipality for their planning policies in the city since reunification six years ago. Kitcher sees the city's special character being sacrificed through ignorance, short-sightedness and the pursuit of profit. Clinging at the city are a host of special interests — government ministries, private contractors, the municipality itself — each oblivious as Kitcher sees it, to all but its own needs.

Scarce open space is designated for luxury apartment towers which provide their inhabitants with some of Jerusalem's most magnificent views but of course block them for everyone else. These buildings break Jerusalem's horizontal skyline, serving as harsh symbols of social inequality and government favoritism.

The Tourism Ministry peddles precious chunks of Jerusalem at discount prices like pieces of Florida swampland to foreign entrepreneurs without regard for the impact of massive hotels on a delicate landscape.

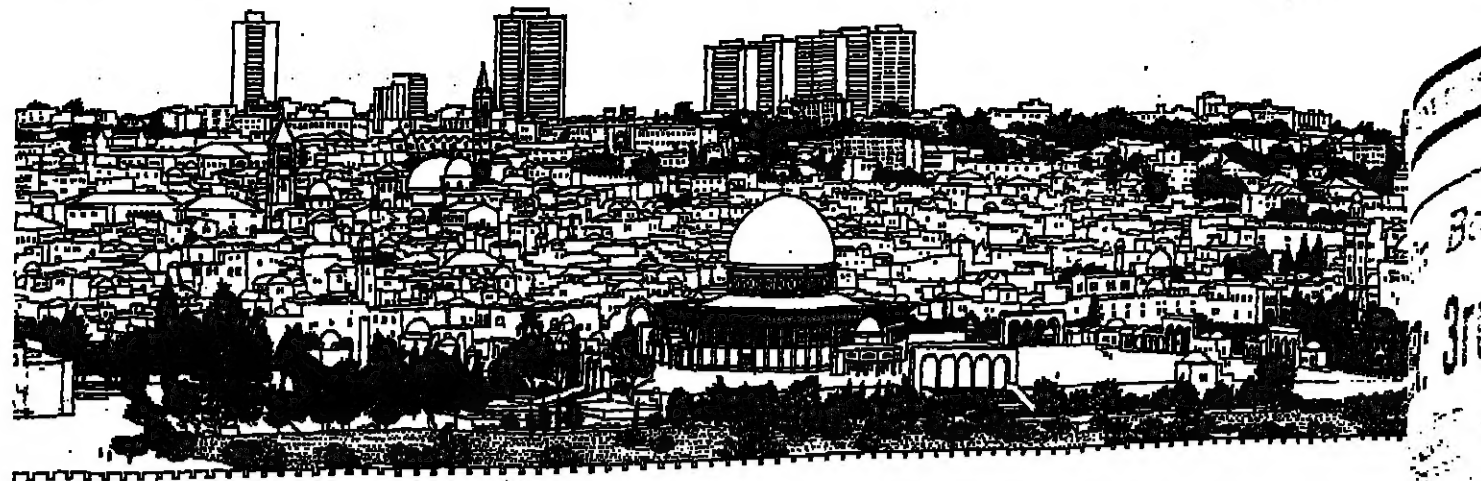

The Municipality encourages high-rise office projects in the centre of the city that not only ignore aesthetics says Kitcher, but common sense. "That these projects do not correspond to the actual market demand for floor space in the city centre is illustrated by the fact that Jerusalem's only high-rise office block (the Rascos tower) had finally to be filled with municipal and government offices since on one else could afford the high rents." These towers, he says, will necessitate new roads that will cost far more than the taxes the municipality hopes to reap from the commercial development — not to mention the cost in environmental deterioration.

Like Kansas City?

One of the motives behind municipal and government support of high-rise blocks, he says, is a feeling that Jerusalem does not look imposing enough for a capital.

"They of course realize that Jerusalem can probably never rival Manhattan. So they have set their sights a bit lower. Their dream of Jerusalem is a sort of copy of Kansas City."

A plan for the central business district drawn up two years ago by the David Best-Gilbert Weil team has been deliberately ignored by the authorities,

View from the Mount of Olives of some of the high-rise projects which have municipal backing, planning permission or licences, from Art Kitcher's book, "The New Jerusalem Planning and Politics."

Kitcher charges, because it would accommodate commercial development in four to seven storey buildings and stresses the need for parks, open spaces and the preservation of views.

On the other hand, Kitcher expresses concern over another plan which has already been approved by the local planning committee — that for the Old City and its environs. Intensive development envisioned in the plan outside Damascus and Jaffa Gates, he fears, would explode the Old City "changing its character from a primarily residential community to a commercial operation — a kind of religious Disneyland."

He is also troubled by the removal from the final plan of a series of maps showing religious, historical and architectural landmarks to be preserved. The removal means they have no legal protection while the landscape about the Old City "the matchless, delicate, poignant landscape, the 'joy of the whole earth', is utterly without defence and is today being randomly bulldozed throughout its length and breadth."

Kitcher accuses the Lands Authority, which owns most of the open land, of deliberately turning potential park sites around the Old City into dumping grounds with Municipality cooperation to insure that the views from them will not be missed when they are eventually blocked by luxury housing.

"The historic Tyropean valley (outside Damascus Gate) is being filled with thousands of tons of rubbish, guaranteeing that several plans drawn up for making the valley a public park will never be realized. The area will instead become a parking lot and then undoubtedly a hotel site."

Fortunately, Kitcher has been disproved about at least one other dump site — the Nicoforia-Omariya area south of the King David Hotel which is to be turned into a 100-dunam park under plans announced this month.

Kitcher does not derive any satisfaction from the knowledge that the decision-making process in Jerusalem is not much different from that in other cities in the world. An underlying attitude here as elsewhere is that economic growth "is an unquestioned Good in itself." The only criterion by which planning schemes are measured, he claims, is that of financial gain.

Writer's criteria

Kitcher has his own set of criteria to offer for Jerusalem planning. Among them:

- A city of human scale.
- A city of panoramas — open and commonly shared.
- A city of visual harmony marked by a horizontal carpet of buildings and trees which follows the line of her hills.
- A skyline, punctuated by structures of religious and public significance, that expresses the community's scale of values.

Kitcher notes that planning procedures are deliberately designed to keep the public as little informed as possible. Nevertheless, the most hopeful development he sees is the increasing involvement of the public in planning affairs. Under the heading "The Monster that Fell," he describes how a series of rise projects from the Omariya district to the King David Annex and House Hotel — were reduced or eliminated because of public pressure. "are in fact few cities in the world which can equal Jerusalem's planning cord in that respect," Kitcher omits his own role as the principal catalyst in these planning battles.

"The New Jerusalem" is a frank, lemmical work aimed at inducing. As such, it doubtless exaggerates times as when Kitcher writes that government's primary aim is to Jerusalem "not great masses of migrants but large sums of foreign money and great numbers of tourists." The most prominent feature of Jerusalem during the past six years is the hotels nor luxury apartment buildings but the massive housing developments around the city.

Nevertheless, Kitcher's book gives a quick and passionate expression of a widely-shared view that the build the New Jerusalem has gotten off an unfortunate start, that the powers, in their concentration on a political and economic interests, have often forgotten the interests of the city and its residents.

Although he sees in Jerusalem an example of "the suicidal impulse of temporary town planning," Kitcher says is not one of despair. "The choice," he writes, "lies between the New Jerusalem according to principles of Baron Haussmann according to the principles of the P. Isidore."

The flow of medicine

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — With reference to Macabee Dean's report, Kupat Holim's trouble-shooter hasn't seen doctor in years" (May 24), I believe your writer did not understand one of the problems, or that the trouble-shooter did not explain it correctly, as he is new at Kupat Holim. The problem referred to is organizing the flow of medicines, which has various aspects requiring skill, knowledge and years' experience even to understand them, never mind correct them. The work and efficiency of the Kupat Holim Department dealing with the flow of medicines has been generally praised, both in this country and abroad. With the exception of difficulties due to "force majeure" or which are not connected with the department or its management (such as wages and strikes), this department has been considered the real trouble-shooter of Kupat Holim and prevents many misunderstandings and difficulties.

Macabee Dean comments: Mr. Yehuda, the trouble-shooter, was quoted correctly in regard to organizing the flow of medicines. It seems strange that the only one in Kupat Holim who found fault with Mr. Yehuda's statement is the person responsible for the flow of medicines.

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — In the article entitled "Well Equipped Schools for the Modern Student" (your issue of May 15) you mention in my name that "The Fund is used exclusively for buildings leased to the Ministry of Education."

Polite customs

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I have had my share of aggravation, rudeness, lack of consideration and extreme bureaucratic treatment by custom workers at Lod.

On May 9, I had occasion to go to the customs in Haifa. I was advised to go to window 117. The clerk on duty looked at my papers and said that my business was with customs at Lod. Then, to my great surprise and pleasure, he asked me to wait a bit. I fully expected him to repeat that I was in the wrong place and that I should go to Lod. Instead, he phoned Lod, inquired into the matter, returned to me and said, "I will make the proper entries for you and you can consider the matter closed."

I am so pleased with the courtesy extended to me that I would publicly like to thank and compliment the clerk at window 117.
